Workshoppers Reach Out at McKendree College

As the wide-eyed delegates strolled into lower Deneen center, few had any idea of what challenges and situations would confront them in the four days ahead. They took their places at the registration tables and soon they received their color coded folders to distinguish different clubs.

Monday night, the Delegates were placed in their groups and had their pictures taken. Then came the first general session. Most of the delegates sat with the people that came from their school or with somebody else they knew.

Ron Ganschinitz, workshop director, make the first of his three appearances, Ed Phelps and IASC president Bill Carlson welcomed the delegates to McKendree, then the "principal" told the delegates some background information about the imaginary school they were a part of for the week. The format had been decided on by the staff the day before.

This began the excitement at both of the four day IASC summer workshops at McKendree College. From that time on, delegates were not from different schools all over the state, but they were all students at the same high school. They were also each in at least one extra-curricular activity.

That first evening after the general session, the clubs had group meetings and were given a problem to solve.

Each club had a Junior Counselor (J.C.) and a Senior Advisor to observe and regulate club meetings. The clubs were not allowed to elect officers that night and some very interesting observations could be made about the roles of leadership.

Monday night's closing held on the steps of Deneen center gave the delegates their first encounter with song leader Jim Fitzgerald, better known by all as "Fitz."

For the next four days, role playing and group participation became great learning experiences for the delegates. In their clubs, they wrote a constitution, determined areas of authority of the student council, and played "prisoner's dilemma," a frustrating game of putting your trust in people and trying to double guess them.

In general assemblies, Ed Phelps, consultant for the workshops and executive secretary for the IASC, led seminars and other activities. Some of the activities were: headbands, squares, the NASA test, games demonstrating one and two-way communication, and other communication games.

Also held during the workshops were seminars for each student council officer. On Tuesday, delegates gathered in swap shop groups divided according to the size of schools they represented, and brought up good ideas to take home.

One should not get the idea that the workshops were entirely seminars and games that you had to get the meaning from. There was also an all school "sports night" with some of the wierdest sports ever contrived. Other fun activities included a talent night, a movie, and a dance, not to mention all the crazy songs and chants led by Fitz and the JCs.

By the middle of the week, a careful observer could see that people who knew each other before the workshop were no longer sitting together. People were reaching out to others, making new friends, and learning to get along with each other.

On Friday morning, tears were shed for all the friends that would probably never be seen again. But after the delegates returned home and their eyes cleared, most of them saw what they gained in the four short days at McKendree.

First Frosh-Soph Orientation Workshop

For the first time, the IASC is sponsoring a workshop designed primarily for the orientation of new student council members.

The workshop will be held at East Bay Camp near Bloomington beginning at 4:00 p.m. on September 19 and continuing until 4:00 p.m. September 21.

Only inexperienced freshmen and sophomore council members are allowed to attend. Basic procedures on how a meeting is run and simple parliamentary procedure are a few examples of what will be covered in the workshop.

The fee for the workshop will be $45, which covers housing facilities, all meals, and any printed material used at the workshop. Each school may send a maximum of five delegates. One advisor may attend. Everyone attending must pay the $45 fee. (see Frosh-Soph application on page 8)

If your school is not a member of the I.A.S.C., you must first pay your membership dues before you are allowed to participate in the workshop. (see application for membership on page 8)

Carlson's Corner

BY BILL CARLSON, I.A.S.C. President

Hello! Welcome to the IASC, the first issue this year of the REPORTER, and the first of what I hope to be many installments of a column written by yours truly. The idea of the president of the state association writing a regular column for the state newspaper has never been tried in Illinois as far as I know, but it has been a successful venture in other states. Based on that, I have decided to give it a try in Illinois and see what happens. I'd like to try to keep you abreast of things we are doing so that you will be more informed and in a good position to give your comments and criticisms on our activities. This is something I hope you will do because I believe that your input will be the deciding factor on whether or not this association is run the way you want it run.

At our first meeting on August second, I brought up the idea of printing an IASC publicity brochure to be passed out to all schools and other professional agencies dealing with education in Illinois. It would be sort of a basic information pamphlet just to let people know who we are and what we do. The board approved the idea, so you should be seeing the results of our efforts soon.

The dates were set for our workshops this year, and I believe there is a list of them somewhere in the paper. Be sure to check it out, because all of these activities promise to be good ones that you won't want to miss.

Interviews for secretary and press-secretary were held on September 12th. All those who applied for the position were informed of the meeting, and hopefully the positions will be filled.

A number of suggestions were brought up to improve the State Convention. If you have any, please fill out and mail the questionnaire in this issue. They will be put in for consideration.

The legislative committee was talked about, but we are still a little unsure of how we wish to pursue it. Phil Hoyt and myself are working on it, and your suggestions would be welcomed. We will be going ahead with the formation of the committee, and applications will be coming shortly. Be looking for them.

These are just a few of the things which I consider most important that went on at the meeting. Again let me ask you to please write with your ideas, criticisms, etc. We need your help. I'll be looking forward to hearing from you. Until then, take care.

I.A.S.C. Board Briefs

The second joint board meeting of the 1974-75, 75-76 executive boards was called to order Saturday morning, August second. In attendance were: Bill Carlson, Phil Hoyt, Ed Pluhar, Lynn Larson, Bill Brown, Mr. Reese Hoskin, Mr. Gary ZumMallen, Mr. Charles Aldrich, Mr. Ed Phelps, Kendall Christiansen, Kathy Kienstra, Mr. Paul Mueller, Dave Murdy, and Mr. Jim Fitzgerald. Following are a few highlights of the meeting:

—The Treasurer's report of $1,732.00 was submitted and accepted.

—The board authorized $75 at Bill Carlson's direction to be used for the printing of I.A.S.C. publicity brochures.

—The board discussed the possibility of the Conference on Student Views being held jointly by the I.A.S.C., Illinois Office of Education, and the Student Advisory Committee.

Bill Carlson and Phil Hoyt were directed to further develop the idea and to report back at the September board meeting.

—Ed Phelps reported the dates for the Frosh-Soph, Materials, and Advisor's workshops and the Conference on Student Views. He suggested the cost for the advisor's workshop to be $25 and for the others, $45 per delegate. The board approved the dates and fees.

—The board decided that all applicants for the positions of Secretary and Press Secretary would be interviewed on Friday, September 12, at Prospect High School.

—Kathy Kienstra announced the completion of the yearbook and said that each of last year's member schools would receive a copy sometime in September.

—The board discussed suggestions for next year's convention, including new ideas for small groups, speakers, and an advisor's program.

—The board discussed the forming of a legislative committee. (see article in this issue)

—The board approved Phil Hoyt's letter and application for discussion group leaders.

—Bill Brown proposed advertising rates for the REPORTER and said that there would be a maximum of 25% advertising in each issue, just enough to cover printing costs. The rates were approved by the board.

—The meeting was adjourned early Sunday afternoon, August third.

More Can be Seen From Towers

The Illinois Association of Student Councils chartered two buses to Decatur, Georgia for the 39th annual National Association of Student Councils/National Association of Student Activities Advisors Conference. One bus left from Chicago Saturday afternoon, June 21, and met the other in St. Louis. From there, the two buses containing over 80 people went straight to Decatur (near Atlanta) ... or almost straight (by way of the Smokies and North and South Carolina).

More than 130 delegates from Illinois attended the conference. We had the largest out-of-state delegation for the second year in a row.

Over 1500 students and advisors from every state in the Union and Puerto Rico attended general sessions, seminars, and activities at Towers High School in Decatur, Georgia. From registration on June 22 until departure on June 26, the very hospitable Decatur-Atlanta area was buzzing with every imaginable accent and variation of the English language.

After eating dinner with their host families Sunday night, June 22, delegates came from houses several miles around to the Towers High School gymnasium for the first general session of the conference. Here they were welcomed with a beautiful and unusual flag presentation. Each state's flag was presented along with slides of scenes in that state and of their capitol building. The Decatur Civil Chorus, and the Towers Chorus and Symphonic Band provided a patriotic musical setting for the program. The delegates were then greeted by Mary Leatherbery, student conference chairman, and by other conference officials.

On Monday morning, the second general session was highlighted by the address of New York Psychologist Murray Banks. He impressed students with unbelievable statistics and his humorous attitude kept people rolling in the aisles. Toward the end of his speech, he mentioned that he was trying for a new world's record for giving the same speech the most times, and that this was over the five thousandth time he had given it.

Monday afternoon, task force meetings, workshops, and school profiles kept students occupied while the advisors had their own program at the Northlake Hilton Inn.

Phil Gugliuzza (Mr. Phil) talks to delegates at Stone Mountain about building others' self image.

Dinner and entertainment Monday night was at beautiful Stone Mountain. "Mr. Phil," executive secretary of the Louisiana Association of Student Councils conducted the program, teaching everyone to do his "dum-dum datta," "dodely-do," and "goin' on a lion hunt" chants. The program ended as the Louisiana delegation passed out the "warm fuzzies" to keep everyone friendly and warm toward others.

Tuesday morning, states had individual meetings. New Illinois officers were introduced and discussion began on proposed NASC/NASAA resolutions.

Seminars on public issues and on various other subjects were held during the day. That night, more than 20 buses were filled and shuffled to Six Flags Over Georgia. At Six Flags, delegates enjoyed the excitement of the "scream machine" (the 105 ft. tall world's biggest roller coaster), among other fun-filled rides and attractions.

State meetings were finished up Wednesday morning from the day before. At the Illinois meeting, it was suggested that someone teach the delegation the words to the Illinois state song. A small group of delegates put their knowledge together and came up with the words to the first verse of the song, but Illinois just couldn't stay together when they were trying to sing it at the next general assembly.

After hearing Illinois' desperate attempt at singing, everyone was delighted to listen to the internationally acclaimed entertainers "Up With People" perform at the third general session.

Sessions on educational issues filled the afternoon, and at night the conference banquet was held at the Royal Coach Inn. A special presentation of a plaque was made to Warren E. Shull, founder of the NASC. Student conference chairman Mary Leatherbery presented Towers High School student council advisor Miss Pat Ireland with a diamond ring, in appreciation of the work she had done on the conference.

From the Editor

As IASC REPORTER-editor, I am planning a few changes to improve the paper in the coming year. A big change is to publish the REPORTER on a monthly basis, as previously it has been less frequent and was limited in the areas of up-to-date news and current issues. Also regular columns will be added dealing with parliamentary procedure, the bicentennial, and hopefully information on current bills concerning high school students. Also, a President's corner will be added, and depending on reader contributions, possibly a section for letters to the editor. Another change in the paper this year is the inclusion of advertising to help finance the REPORTER.

Although changes are necessary in order to improve the paper, the successful features from last year must be kept or nothing would be gained from experience.

Some of the features I intend to continue to include are Project of the Month, District News, Important Dates to Remember, and a slightly changed IASC Spotlight.

Suggestions and objective criticism from readers about articles and ideas for articles are appreciated. Letters to the editor are also welcomed. Equal space will be allotted for each side of controversial issues.

I suggest that each district association make it a duty of their vice-president to report news and events for publication in the REPORTER. Through the REPORTER, districts can publicize events to schools within their own district as well as let other districts know how active they are.

I also suggest that each local student council appoint or elect a person from their council to report local projects to me for consideration as Project of the Month articles. These projects do not necessarily have to have been successful. If it failed, it is possible that the project could be revised and improved upon by other councils.

Hopefully, with YOUR help, the REPORTER will prove to be a valuable tool and resource for student councils throughout the state.

All contributions should be sent to: Bill Brown, IASC REPORTER-editor, 305 N. Second Street, St. Joseph, IL 61873.

The two IASC buses take a rest stop in the Smoky Mountains while on their way to the national conference in Georgia.

"When people hear the words student council, they think of Earl Reum," said Mary Leatherbery as she introduced Mr. Reum, Coordinator of Student Activities, Jefferson County Public Schools, Colorado.

Reum talked about changes that have occurred in public schools and told of the "$25,000 idea," a dream, cause, or goal to fulfill. Using illustrations such as ropes, a telephone, a glass eye, scarves and a spectrum, Mr. Reum used magic tricks to show students why they should "build bridges." He stressed the point that apathy is the opposite of love and "Indifference, or apathy is what is killing schools today."

Mr. Reum pointed out that the five days at Towers High School will help open the eyes of all the delegates, and that the name is significant because things that most people will never see can be seen from towers.

The banquet came to an end with Joe Renfroe, the assistant to the superintendent of the DeKalb school system, presenting his slide show "America." It was unique from other shows done on the United States in that the music and slides stressed the courage of Americans.

On the way home, the two IASC chartered buses stopped by New Orleans where the delegates spent one and a half hours on a bus tour of the city. Some of the sights they strained to see at 10 o'clock at night were the 180-year-old St. Louis Cathedral, houses built more than one and a half centuries ago, an above ground cemetery, riverboats on the Mississippi, famous Canal and Bourbon streets, and the gigantic Superdome.

The buses arrived in St. Louis about 30 hours after leaving Towers High School. We have executive secretary Edmund Phelps to thank for the careful planning that went into the bus trip this year. Ed will also plan next year's trip to Portland, Oregon. Rumor has it that on the way, we will be seeing the Badlands of South Dakota, Mt. Rushmore, and Yellowstone National Park, and coming home, we will see the Grant Canyon! Next year, however, Ed plans to stop at motels to sleep. See you on the bus!

From the Student Council Compass

"Parliamentary procedure is a system of rules and customs generally used in deliberative groups to conduct business and to secure action on proposals. This is one instrument groups may use when making decisions."

"Knowing how to work with a group for the achievement of permanent good is one way an individual can express concern for society and at the same time produce a tangible improvement."

MS LEGS Contest - Project of the Month

BY CHUCK ZENT

Not to be outdone by Joe Namath, Lake Forest High School recently sanctioned an MS LEGS contest. The objective of the contest was to raise funds for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and to inform students what MS is and how it affects other people.

Linda Lizut, youth coordinator of the Chicago Chapter of the National MS Society, suggested the idea at the March 8 meeting of the Chicagoland MS Youth Council. Members were instructed to organize an MS LEGS contest within their own school, and to write to other local schools and request that they do so also.

At Lake Forest, the first step was to clear the project with their school principal. Lake Forest has very strict guidelines concerning solicitation by outside organizations and the project had to be built around these. The principal and student council president Chuck Zent agreed that it would be legitimate to run the contest through the school paper with the consent of the editor.

The editor, Laura Wheeler, was contacted and she agreed to print an article describing the contest and MS in general, and to publish photographs of the boy's legs. A ballot was located on the corner of the paper stating the contestant's name and the school organization he represented (letters had previously been sent to the faculty advisors of clubs asking them to sponsor a candidate). Posters and announcements were utilized to publicize the contest. Students were asked to contribute as much as possible.

Lake Forest's greatest handicap was that due to school policy, they were unable to directly ask students in the halls to vote and to contribute. Ballot boxes and collection cans were placed in the main office and it was up to the students to take the time to come in. The result was that many people read the article, but some failed to vote or contribute.

When asked what he would do different if he were to do the project again, Council President Chuck Zent responded, "I believe two things would have aided the project. First, a definite tone must be established, i.e. the students should be aware that although the contest is a hoax, the purpose is not. Second, it would be best to have the winner chosen on how much money is contributed in his name rather than the number of votes he received. If permitted by your school, direct solicitation of the students would be much more favorable."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bob Hume, Dave Guth, and Bob Anderson have beautiful legs. Each won the MS LEGS competition at his school this spring. Besides Lake Forest High School, student councils at Thornwood, Evergreen Park, and Thornton Township raised almost 500 dollars for the Chicago Chapter, National Multiple Sclerosis Society with the project.

More important than cash, these students raised the MS consciousness of their schools and communities. MS is NOT muscular dystrophy. The two are often confused. MS affects young adults from 15-40.

What you do speaks so loudly that what you say cannot be heard!

Multiple sclerosis is a disease of the central nervous system. Scar tissue in the brain and spinal column causes nerve impulses to "short circuit." MS is not a killer, but may result in crippling, slurred speech, blurry vision, and loss of coordination. Symptoms tend to become worse as the patient grows older.

Your student council can sponsor an MS LEGS contest as a fund raiser and/or public education project. For more information about MS LEGS and other MS-related projects, write to Linda Lizut, Youth Coordinator, Chicago Chapter, National Multiple Sclerosis Society, 53 W. Jackson, Chicago 60604.

Legislative Committee to be Formed

At the 1975 convention of the IASC, a resolution was passed mandating the executive board of the IASC to establish a Legislative Committee composed of seven students.

The purpose of this committee is to keep informed on any current or pending Legislative Bills having to do with students. Also this committee is to have the responsibility of supplying the students of Illinois with information on the bills so that they will be well informed and may express their opinions on them.

The executive board is currently looking into what restrictions and complications there are in having such a committee, and how much financing it would require.

Be watching in future issues of the REPORTER for more information concerning the formation of the Legislative Committee.
