Illinois Association of Student Councils

December, 1975

NASC/NASAA Bicentennial Conference

The National Association of Student Councils/National Association of Student Activity Advisors 1976 Bicentennial Conference is only a few short months away. From June 20-24, student council members from all over the United States and their advisors will gather at James Madison High School in Portland, Oregon for five days of learning, challenging experiences and fun.

For the past two years, Illinois has had the largest out-of-state delegation to the National Conference. The IASC doesn't intend to let participation drop because of the greater traveling distance involved this year. They will be chartering at least one bus for the scenic trip through the West.

The bus will leave from Chicago on June 17. On the way, the IASC delegation will be spending one night at Mt. Rushmore in South Dakota, and also at Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming. The bus will return through California, stop at Yosemite National Park and the Grand Canyon. It will arrive in Chicago on June 28.

The cost, which includes bus transportation and lodging during the trip (four nights in motels), will be $215.00. The conference fee for students will be $50.00 to cover registration, lodging in the homes of Portland area residents, and meals during the conference. So, the total cost to students for the eleven day vacation will be $265.00, including everything except food costs on the way and the return trip, which could be safely estimated at about $40.00.

The cost for advisors will be more because they will be staying at the Portland Hilton Hotel and Convention Center during the conference.

This scene from the 1975 conference banquet will be similar to the 1976 banquet to be held at the Portland Hilton.

The students in the Portland area have been making plans for the 40th annual conference since early 1974. Madison High School has been working on the conference with over a dozen committees working in such areas as program, housing, transportation, recreation, etc., etc., etc. Co-chairmen for the conference are Mr. Hal Smith and Cindi Owens of James Madison High School.

Following are some of the highlights of the conference planned thus far:

1. Ex-governor of the state of Oregon, Tom McCall, will speak to the conference regarding environmental concerns vs. economical concerns.
2. Mr. Charles King, expert in the field of human relations, will entertain and motivate students during the conference.

3. President Ford has been contacted regarding his possible participation in the conference. Confirmation of his participation will occur only at the last minute.
4. Panel discussions will be held, and leaders in education and other fields will join the conference to share their knowledge and experience in seminars on school and social issues and professional programs for advisors.
5. Student workshop leaders will guide discussions on ideas to give inspirations to student councils and their activity programs.
6. During the evenings, delegates will be given the opportunity of experiencing Oregon's recreational wonderland. The evening program, to be held in an outdoor amphi-theater, will be a Bicentennial program. Opportunities will be given to visit the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry and the Western Forestry Center prior to the Bicentennial program.
7. On another evening, the delegates will be taken to a large park along the Columbia River, where they will be entertained by the Warm Springs Indian, as well as given the opportunity for swimming and boating, and an evening bonfire, followed by a fireworks display, culminating the evening activities.
8. There will be a formal banquet at the Hilton Hotel, followed by a formal dance at the nearby Masonic Temple.

If you think you might want to go:

Membership in the NASC or NASAA is required before students may attend the conference. Membership is $25, of which $10 is for a subscription to Student Advocate, the national magazine. One Advisor's membership in NASAA is automatically included in school membership in NASC. Send fees to the NASSP Office of Student Activities.

Any number of delegates from a school may attend. If you want to go on the IASC bus, advisors should have received an application with their advisor's newsletter. If you didn't, write to Edmund Phelps, IASC Executive Secretary, Collinsville High School, Collinsville, IL. 62234.

If you do not plan to go on the IASC bus, write to NASSP Office of Student Activities, 1904 Association Dr., Reston, VA. 22091 for registration forms for the 1976 NASC/NASAA Conference. Students going by means other than the IASC bus must have a faculty advisor or responsible adult accompany them.

Students who wish to conduct a conference workshop on a student council issue should send the following information to the NASSP Office of Student Activities: name, home and school address, a brief summary of leadership experience, and a letter of recommendation from the student council advisor or principal. A detailed position paper on the proposed topic is also required.

Conference Association Involves More Students

The Okaw Valley Association of Student Councils, a conference association, held a meeting on November 20. About 50 students from seven schools attended.

Two sessions of several discussion group topics were held, while student council officers and advisors discussed student council-administrator relations and why administrators make the decisions they do. Several principals and superintendents of schools in the conference were asked to come for discussion, but none were able to attend.

In the general sessions, it was discussed and decided how the good sportsmanship award should be awarded.

IASC Conducts 2nd Advisor's Workshop

"All were tired — but happy." That's the way Buffalo Grove Student Activities director Paul Mueller described the close of the IASC's second advisor's workshop. This year's workshop was held at East Bay Camp, Bloomington, on November 13 and 14. Twenty student council advisors from throughout Illinois worked with IASC Executive Secretary Ed Phelps.

The student council advisors present represented a considerable cross-section of Illinois advisors. The group included several who attended last year's workshop and advisors with zero to twelve years of student council experience. Included also was a variety of one to nineteen years of teaching and administrative experience.

The workshop was designed to give both new and experienced participants a better or a renewed understanding of their roles, responsibilities, and problems as student council advisors.

Discussions included such important topics as public relations, liaison with the administration, leadership training (of students), and leadership style (of advisors). Many fundamental student council topics were also covered to help advisors with the organization and development of their local councils. Such areas as constitutions, parliamentary procedure, areas of authority, and officers' training helped the advisors with some of the more basic problems of student councils.

By the conclusion of this year's advisors workshop, the participants had compiled a booklet of "Hints for a First Year Advisor." This booklet should be published and ready for distribution at the State Convention in Chicago this May.

NEW RESOURCES

The Illinois Office of Education is preparing a new and exciting publication for Illinois Student Government leaders. The Illinois Student Government Catalog — a resource manual in a newsmagazine form — will soon be distributed to every student council member, student activity advisor, and principal in Illinois High Schools.

The catalog is being prepared by two college freshmen with student council experience — Dave Murdy of Rock Island and Kendall Christiansen of Morton. It will be a 96 page illustrated publication containing articles and information in three major areas: 1) articles on leadership development by nationally known authors in the field of student council; 2) issues facing students such as student representation on local school boards, alternatives in education, and student rights; and 3) an extensive resource section containing a wide variety of information and ideas for progressive student councils.

The Illinois Student Government Catalog will be a ready reference and guide to students and administrators on the development and maintenance of a dynamic student council in today's high school.

The Illinois Student Government Catalog will be provided at no cost as a service of the Illinois Office of Education.

Carlson's Corner

BY BILL CARLSON, I.A.S.C. President

Have you ever tried to write a column for anything on a deadline before? Not that meeting deadlines is really a problem, but when you have to write something totally off the top of your head, it's often hard to think of things to write about. I find myself in that situation right now — my mind being in a hundred or so different areas (school, Conference on Student Views, Legislative Committee, other articles, etc.). So, I'm sure you can see the problem I have.

Bearing that in mind, I'm going to cheat a little bit on this month's column, and let you read something written by someone else. It's really not cheating that much, though, as I feel the content of this article can be very useful to any active council person. I hope you will agree with me, and take these ideas to heart. They are, or can when used, be extremely valuable.

There are certain rules that any group or organization must follow, and that includes student council. These rules, however, are often in a form we might call "unwritten rules." They therefore often go unnoticed by many. What Kent M. Keith has done in his book The Silent Revolution in the Seventies (available through the NASSP), is set down some of these rules. Below, these "rules" are summarized, and they are something that I believe should be distributed to every council member:

1. Be a realistic optimist. Begin with the idea that it can be done; follow up with a realistic idea of what the obstacles will be.
2. Success has a way of producing more success. Start with little successes and work up.
3. When you're working with people, find areas of agreement and expand them. People are always shocked to learn how much they have in common.
4. Listening may be enough. Listening sympathetically may be all people want from you; and though it may not seem like it, you are helping them.
5. Promise something less; deliver something more. Promise less than you may be able to deliver. Other people will make their own plans based on your expectations so, if the bottom falls out, you'll be glad you didn't promise The World.
6. Ask crucial questions at the right time. If the principal is tired and harried, he won't want to hear too many new wild-sounding student council proposals. If possible, try to see people when they seem fresh, or relaxed, or most open to new ideas.
7. Get the key people involved. People want to call an idea "theirs," particularly if it looks like it will pass, and become a policy. By and large, the involvement of key people will make the program go smoother, and be more fun and instructive all the way around. Get them involved as early as possible and as much as possible, without losing control over the situation.
8. Give credit where credit is due. Everyone likes to be recognized when he does a good job, and recognizing good work is a way to ensure that there will be more of it.
9. Get your facts straight. It's always embarrassing to go charging off after someone, only to discover that your information is completely wrong.
10. Talk with people individually. This can be especially important when talking with an opponent. People often behave differently when they're in a group. Talk with people individually and take away the group pressure; listen to each person much more as he really is.

Five I.A.S.C. District

Eastern Illinois District

The bicentennial convention theme of "A Past to Remember, A Future to Mold" sums up the activities at the Eastern Illinois District convention held November 13 in the new union building of EIU in Charleston.

Entertainment at the beginning of the first general session was provided by vocalists Roger Finney and Fred Hammond of Westfield H. S., the host school for the convention.

District president Tina Weddell presided over the business meeting. Reports were given by state officers on the National Conference and the McKendree Workshops. Nearly fifteen amendments to the constitution were proposed, and most of them passed. The amendments dealt mostly with wording and items previously overlooked. Officer qualifications were also involved.

Nominations and campaign speeches were made, making two candidates eligible for each office, except three for the office of Vice-President.

Ten discussion groups were held concurrently, after which delegates were given the opportunity to talk with the candidates running for office.

Eastern Illinois District is divided into seven areas, or sub-districts, to try to improve communication within the district. The schools in each area met to elect their representative to be on the district's executive board.

Dinner was in the Union Ballroom, and the address was given by Mr. Bill Pyle, director of Southern Illinois' Talent Search Center. Mr. Pyle talked on the need for good high school counselors and the importance of their work.

The delegates met for the second general session to vote on amendments and new officers. Officers elected are: Secretary, Margie Goeckner (Alamont); Treasurer, Cindy Whitaker (Neoga); Vice-President, Randy Lane (Sullivan); and President, Pat Leggitt (Oblong).

Kickapoo District

On Saturday, November 1, the Kickapoo district conducted a parliamentary procedure and leadership training workshop at Paxton High School. The workshop concentrated on two important areas in student councils, 1) conduct of meetings and 2) good officers. Over 80 delegates from fourteen schools attended.

Since parliamentary procedure is a skill needed by good citizens, the Future Farmers of America (FFA) organization strongly encourages parliamentary procedure skills through contests. The Paxton FFA chapter and their advisor, Mr. Carl Burkeybile, led the part of the workshop concentrating on parliamentary procedure. The FFA chapter conducted a mock contest to demonstrate correct parliamentary procedure. After demonstrations of correct and incorrect parliamentary procedure, the delegates divided into small groups led by FFA members, where the FFA members answered questions.

The second half of the workshop concentrated on each office in the student council. Each of the officers of the Kickapoo District led a workshop on their office, defining the duties of the office, and discussing the various problems incurred in the office. Andy Hamilton of the Rantoul High School Student Council led a workshop for general members.

Another workshop is planned by the Kickapoo District for next February 28.

Little Egypt District

The Little Egypt District, southernmost of the districts of the IASC, held its eleventh annual convention on November 1, at Sparta H. S. 245 students from 21 schools were in attendance. The theme was "A Bicentennial Salute — We've Come A Long Way," and the speaker's platform was decorated with an array of red, white, and blue stars and stripes. The backdrop featured the drummer, flag carrier, and flute player of the American Revolution. Members of the host school delegation were dressed in Red, White, and Blue.

Frances Iwasko, LEDSC President, presided over the meeting. Mr. Ed

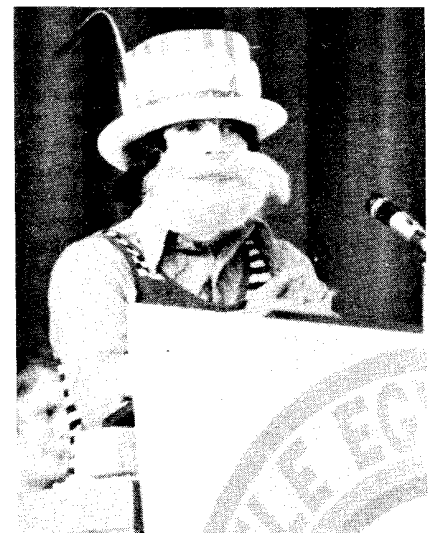

Phelps, principal of Collinsville H. S. and executive secretary of the IASC, was the keynote speaker. In the morning, eight discussion groups were held to exchange ideas, and in the afternoon, eight mini-workshop activities were conducted.

Entertainment was provided during lunch by the Sparta H. S. Chorus.

In the afternoon, reports were given by each district officer and by representatives from the IASC executive board. Candidate nomination and election took place, and after three tie votes for Vice-President, the following were elected new LEDSC officers: Secretary, Lucy Knight (Carmi); Treasurer, Terri Trees (Harrisburg); Vice-President, Doug Moore (Frankfort), and President, Joe Romano (Sparta).

The host school for the 1976 convention will be Frankfort H.S. in West Frankfort, with Cindy Lee as Convention Secretary.

The participation award went to Frankfort High School. This award is presented annually to the school in the LEDSC which is most active in student council on the district, state, and national levels, as determined by the number of points awarded the school according to a pre-determined point system.

s Elect New Officers

Kaskaskia District

The 11th annual KDSC workshop was held on October 1, at Edwardsville Senior High School. The consultant for the workshop was Mr. Ed Phelps, IASC Executive Secretary, speaking on student leadership.

The theme for the convention planned for December 6 at Centralia H. S. is "1776-1976 — Where do we go from here?" Dr. John Rider, a professor of mass communications, will be the keynote speaker.

The executive board is in the process of putting together and printing a KDSC handbook. This handbook will contain various information about the district history. Also such things as officer duties, the constitution, and information about each individual member school will be included.

North Central District

Activities are under way in the new North Central District. This is one of the new districts that was formed with the split of the Northwest District.

It was shown at the district's first convention, held on September 25, that there is a great deal of interest among member schools in district activities. The schools attending this convention made several helpful recommendations to the new executive board.

The executive board met at Sycamore H. S. on October 21 and has planned several activities for the new district. It has been decided that there will be a constitutional convention devoted entirely to forming changes in the new constitution and working out the problems that came up when it was adopted. The district will also have a newsletter, and a list of schools interested in exchanges circulated among its members.

They have several schools who volunteered to host district activities and they are planning to take advantage of them. Geneva H.S. was selected as the host school for the spring convention. They also plan to make a report at the state convention next year on the progress of their project, "Project Involvement." This is a project to get every school that is eligible for membership in the N. C. District to join up and become active. The next district executive board meeting is on December 2, at Harvard H. S.

Northeast District

The Northeast District Convention was held on November 8, at Proviso East High School. The theme of the convention was "Lift Every Voice." The activity began with a continental breakfast in the student cafeteria.

In attendance were 37 schools out of a possible 119. At the first general session, President Doug Sokolowski introduced the NED executive board and IASC President Bill Carlson, who introduced state board members attending the convention.

The keynote speaker was Dr. Joseph M. Cronin, State Superintendent of Education. Dr. Cronin spoke on student involvement in school administration.

Kathy Edmundson of Downer's Grove High School, who is chairperson of the Student Advisory Committee to the State Board of Education, also spoke at the first general session. Kathy spoke on the role of

The SAC and stressed her opinion that students are not "Future leaders," but "Leaders of today."

The delegates then dispersed in to some thirty-six seminars and discussion groups. During the seminars, the business meeting was held which one student from each school was allowed to attend. Presiding at the meeting was Chris Schultz, NED first Vice-President.

After the seminars, entertainment was provided by the band and assembly group "Freewheelin'," booked by Blytham Limited of Champaign. Candidate speeches were also delivered at this time.

Lunch was provided in the cafeteria, followed by some free time for the delegates to go through the "Hall of Ideas."

The third general session gave students a chance to make comments on the "Hall of Ideas" in a rap session. One representative from each exhibit sat in the front row to answer questions.

Two more sessions of the seminars were then held and the business meeting was concluded. The main changes made in the constitution at the business meeting were 1) adding a student officer of Activities Co-ordinator and 2) changing the office of second Vice-President to Communications Secretary.

In the fourth general session, Mr. James Waldorf, assistant principal of Proviso East High School, delivered the challenge, which was for the students to take their role as student leaders more seriously. He related a conversation he had had with Mr. Darryl Coburn of Blytham Limited. Mr. Coburn had been an officer in the NED when he was in high school, and he commented that things have changed, and that now there is more of a party atmosphere throughout the convention.

New officers were then announced: Secretary, Kendra Blik (William Fremd); Treasurer, Barb DePasquale (Main West); Communications Secretary, Loretta Kube (Elk Grove); Vice-President, Amy Allen (Warren); and President, Chris Schultz (Bene Academy). Mr. George Barrett of Buffalo Grove High School was chosen by the advisors to be the advisor-at-large.

Prairie Eight District

The convention of the Prairie Eight District was held at Kankakee Community College on November 6. The theme of the convention, hosted by Clifton Central High School, was "Spirit of '76."

The address entitled "Juvenile Justice" was given by Edward Smith, a Kankakee lawyer and registered pharmacist.

In the business meeting, treasurer Jane Miedema of St. Anne H. S. reported an ending balance of $1,105.04. Vice-President David Butterfield's report about the district newsletter and workshop was read, and the delegates passed two bylaws and one amendment. The bylaws dealt with filling a vacant district office and establishing sub-districts by counties. The amendment provided for the replacement of Advisors-at-Large who miss three consecutive board meetings.

I.A.S.C. Spotlights Kevin Ritter

IASC Press Secretary Kevin Ritter was appointed to the position in September by the executive board. He was one of six students interviewed for Press Secretary at this time. Normally, the Press Secretary is supposed to be appointed by the board at the state convention, however, there were no applicants last year.

Duties of the IASC Press Secretary are to send out press releases to the news media and the NASC, covering IASC and district activities, and to compile a yearbook at the end of the year to be sent to all member schools.

Besides being on student council for his second year, Kevin also is active in

Council Commemorative Considered

Last year, the Washington Association of Student Councils began a campaign to have the U. S. Postal Service issue a commemorative stamp honoring student councils. Brewster H. S. Student Council in Brewster, Washington sent a letter to the Postmaster General and the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee advocating the stamp.

The letter pointed out that a postage stamp would open people's eyes to the fact that students involved in student government are working toward building better schools that build better people. The letter recommended issuing a stamp honoring the Student Councils of the United States because they are nonprofit organizations, both locally and nationally, and because student councils' purpose benefits a large majority of students and schools in the United States.

The above information is from the October issue of Student Advocate. To support the campaign for a student council commemorative stamp, write the U. S. Postmaster General and Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee, both at Washington, D. C. 20260.

FFA, National Honor Society, Band, the Annual Staff, 4-H, and is a school photographer. Outside of school, Kevin likes outdoor sports, motorcycle riding, electronics, and mechanics. He especially enjoys farming and plans to major in an agricultural field at the U of I in Champaign-Urbana.

Walking alone in a woods, girls, and "rapping with someone in a one to one conversation" are some of Kevin's favorite things in life. He also likes nearly all people, except when they get snobbish or stuck-up.

Kevin lives on a farm with his parents and three brothers near Kinmundy, and attends Kinmundy-Alma High School.

He first decided to run for Press Secretary at the state convention last May. His advisor, Mr. James Wells, who is also on the executive board this year, encouraged him to apply for the office.

Kevin's interest in the IASC and its districts rose when he attended the KDSC convention last year, the state workshop at McKendree college, and the state convention.

Hoping to be able to attend each district convention, Kevin wants to be able to give them good coverage in the yearbook. Also, at the end of the year, he wants to be able to help next year's Press Secretary get started.

According to Kevin, the biggest problem facing him this year was getting a late start. Kevin commented that he had been afraid to run at the convention, but now he wishes he hadn't been, so he encourages others to run for office at the convention next year. He also said that anyone running for Press Secretary next year should be ready to do a lot of work for little recognition.

As Press Secretary, Kevin wants to correct misconceptions people have about student council. He wants to inform the public about the IASC and tell member schools more about it. Kevin reminds us "How are people to know about things without being told about them?"

Kevin felt he could fulfill the responsibility of informing schools and the public about the advantages of belonging to the IASC, so he wanted to become involved with the association.

The roles of student government and the IASC, according to Kevin, should mainly be to develop leadership skills, build better citizens, and to help give students a better understanding of the functioning of the state and national governments.

Warning:

There will be an additional registration fee for schools wishing to pay their dues at the state convention. The executive board is asking that all membership dues be paid by April 11, 1976.
